DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
  - I. Claims 17, 265-268 are drawn to a method of attenuating an infection caused by a member of the Streptococcus genus, classified in class 435, subclass 340.
  - II. Claim 18 is drawn to a method of detection, classified in class 435, subclass 6.
  - III. Claims 198-233 and 236 are drawn to an isolated polynucleotide and recombinant vector, classified in class ~~435~~<sup>536</sup>, subclass ~~340~~<sup>23.1</sup>.
  - IV. Claims 234-235 and 237-264 are drawn to an isolated polypeptide, a method of using the polypeptide and a method of producing the polypeptide classified in class 424, subclass 184.1.
2. The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions II and I are related as methods. The methods are distinct as claimed because they have different methods with different method steps; different functions and the effects have different final outcomes. Group I is drawn to a method of attenuation. The method of group II does not require the same method steps; use the same reagents or produces the same result. For instance Group I's method for attenuation administers a polypeptide, which is unlike the method of group II. Each group has requires additional unrelated agents, produce different effects and have different functions from the other group. Therefore, the methods of the inventions are distinct as claimed.

Inventions IV and I are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case, the method of attenuation of Group I can be used in a materially different product. For instance, attenuation can be achieved by providing a host animal with an immunoeffective amount of protective antibodies. Likewise, the polypeptide can be used with other methods. Therefore, the inventions are distinct.

Inventions II and III are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case, polynucleotide can be used in a materially different method. For instance, polynucleotides can be used to produce probes and primers. Therefore, the inventions are distinct.

Inventions III and IV are related as different products. The products are distinct as claimed because they have different structures and different uses. Group III is drawn to an isolated nucleic acid; while group IV is drawn to an isolated polypeptide. Each group has a different function, effect and is capable of use without the other. Each group has a different structure, produces different effects and has a different function from the other group. Therefore, the products of the inventions are distinct as claimed.

3. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group I is not required for Groups II-IV, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

5. Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
